#092 The Trigger Issue

 The Cryptid Factor

13 May · 59 min 37 sec

Episode Description

Here we are again - in a scarily regular type fashion! In here theres there's your usual Schreiber wang-ons, Buttons blah-blahs & Darby breakdowns - but in amongst it all there's an ACTUAL EARTH RUMBLING! Also you'll find flying zombie salt shakers, flying spaghetti monsters, haunted swag dolls, Donald Duck call-ups, unlicensed cut-outs, mountain cover-ups, coat-tail ridings, quantum imaginary mates, cringy cameos and conscious shoes. Also we have a seemingly 'fresh' eye-witness account of a Squatch along with some massive Shaq-attack footprints!

TRIGGER WARNING For those of you who get easy triggered from excessive trigger warnings... this episode may not be for you!

- 5 cancelled LGBTQ TV shows that deserved better

1. Our Flag Means Death

Despite the work of fans, the skull-and-crossbones flag has been lowered on the pirate drama. (HBO Max)

Our Flag Means Death creator David Jenkins announced in March that the queer pirate series is no more after it failed to find a new home.

The series was cancelled in January, after only two seasons, and fans were not happy. The decision to end the show prompted a fan-led campaign paying for a gigantic advert in New York's Times Square, demanding a third season. A petition was also launched, garnering more than 87,000 signatures.

But Jenkins wrote on Instagram on 4 March: "We've reached the end of the road, at least as far as this sweet show is concerned."

6. 'Our Flag Means Death' (2022)

Look, if we did not have this show on our list, Tumblr would somehow emerge from the internet to hunt us down and make us walk the plank. But the fact that there's still such a fan response to all the vibrant queer relationships on "Our Flag Means Death" is a testament to the show's ability to take the best tropes of the romance genre and cunningly refashion them for a cheeky pirate adventure sitcom. It's the relationships that get to be earnest inside the comedy hijinks, and so whether it's Ed (Taika Waititi) and Stede (Rhys Darby), Pete (Matthew Maher) and Lucius (Nathan Foad), Olu (Samson Kayo) and Jim (Vico Ortiz) and Archie (Madeleine Sami) and also maybe real historical pirate Zheng Yi Sao (Rubio Quan), "Our Flag Means Death" offers you a treasure trove of 'ships that not only sail, but conquer the high seas. —SS

== Love Notes ==

Hey lovelies. Sorry for the lack of recap yesterday, I was pretty burnt out for a number of reasons. Idk if this is gonna make sense tonight so apologies if it doesnt.

I wanted to spend tonight expressing how much I hope you know that you really are a wonderful, loveable being.

You are flawed, and you are messy, and that's what I love about you.

You all work so hard on yourselves, on helping others, on spreading joy...and some days you work really hard on just getting by. Sometimes we do things more messily than we want, sometimes things turn out right and sometimes things turn out wrong. But that doesn't mean something is wrong with you lovelies. What it means is that life is messy, and we are messy and every day we grow, and we learn and we adapt, and we keep trying until the messy things start to solidify and clean up a bit.

Our mistakes are just opportunities to learn, and to grow, and as long as we persevere, we'll keep growing into wonderfully slightly less messy creatures that draw and write silly things and bring joy to each other.

You are very much loved, no matter how much (little or a lot) messy we all are. Just remember that. You are more than one thing -- you are a gazillion tiny things wrapped up in one wonderful package, and each one of those things changes over time. You aren't who you were yesterday today, and you won't be exactly the same person tomorrow. But you'll still be wonderful, and you'll still be you, and you'll still be loved <3 Rest well lovelies, be kind to yourselves tonight.
