Well the last two days were big clowning days for everyone! Early Friday we had Chaos Dad commenting on a tweet from March.

Source: David Jenkins Twitter

Next, fans noticed that the "Got a really good feeling about 2024" post that David took down from Instagram was re-added. Our friend cremeishere noticed that the post had been removed from David's Instagram after one of the cancellations (around March 22). Today however, it was noticed that it was back. Do we know exactly when it came back? No idea-- but Honking ensues!

Source: CremelsHere's Twitter

And if that wasn't enough honking, our friend Jules mentioned the following from Kinga's recent post about Simone LeBone, "When dad is working we're napping" and asked "what is he working on"? Good question.

Writers & script editors

Nathan Foad // 31
Writer/actor // Newark, Newark (BBC2)

Nathan Foad is best known to viewers as Lucius Spriggs, the scribe with a sideline in art aboard the pirate ship in HBO's Our Flag Means Death, shown in the UK on BBC2. The East Midlands-born writer and actor was one of the freshest faces in the cast, having been picked for the role by Taika Waititi after his tweets caught the eye of the director. He became something of a scene-stealer and his star-making turn is one of the best examples of the show's progressive attitude to gay relationships.

Foad made his name when he put his home town on the map with his semi-autobiographical sitcom Newark, Newark, acting alongside Morgana Robinson and Mathew Horne in the three-part series, which debuted on Gold in 2022 and has subsequently aired on BBC2.

"Nathan's voice runs the gamut from sweet to dirty, silly to wicked, all across impeccably plotted story"

Dave Evans
Development executive Balloon Entertainment

He has also written episodes of Vico Films' The Young Offenders and Roughcut's recent BBC3 sitcom Things I Should Have Done, as well as penning some of Tom Allen's barbed quips on Love Productions' The Great British Bake Off: An Extra Slice for Channel 4.

Acting-wise, he has popped up in Roughcut's Sky comedy Bloods and, proving his versatility, voiced a toilet in Blink Industries' surreal C4 animated comedy Don't Hug Me I'm Scared.

Another feather in Foad's cap was his Royal Shakespeare Company debut in April, bringing his comic chops to the role of Costard in Emily Burns' production of Love's Labour's Lost.

"There are plenty of reasons why I shouldn't have succeeded in this industry," he reflects. "I am a working-class, state-educated queer person from a small East Midlands market town. My mum worked in a chip shop and my dad in a call centre. A career in the arts seemed nigh-on impossible for someone from my background, but I have spent the past decade working myself silly and banging down doors. I am proud of that."

On Newark, Newark, Nathan impressed Balloon head of development Dave Evans with his collaborative work ethic, humble demeanour and "dedication to delivering the best possible drafts".

Evans says: "Watching him with director Amanda Blue was a joy. He was on set for almost every take and always engaged sensitively and thoughtfully – theirs was a rare, genuine creative dialogue."

Foad teamed up again with Balloon last year to develop Triplets Baby, a proof-of-concept short that was "filthy and insane", says Evans, who declares: "Nathan's already one of my favourite writers, line for line, in any medium."

As for what makes Nathan's writing stand out, Evans says: "He has a pure love of, and talent for, writing and delivering actual jokes. That sounds like a pre-requisite for a comedy writer and performer, but so much currently in the genre has only an atmosphere of warmth or kookiness with no meat on the bone."

"Nathan's work is substantial and hilarious, his voice running the gamut from sweet to dirty, silly to wicked and all across impeccably plotted story. He's the real deal."

'Our Flag Means Death' (2022-2023)

Created by David Jenkins

There has been no louder vocal disappointment than that of the cancelation of the very beloved pirate series Our Flag Means Death. This series provided comfort in a plethora of manners to a largely underserved audience of misfits, outcasts, and weirdos. The queer community especially championed this series with its extremely inclusive storylines around love that can occur in all shapes, sizes and colors, especially in a market that lacks such diverse representation.

== Love Notes ==

Hey there Lovelies! I hope you all are getting some much needed rest this weekend!

It's been a lot lately, huh? The world, elections, so many different countries struggling, online -- everywhere's been pretty crazy lately. I know a lot of you have so much on your minds, and rightly so. When so much is happening all at once, seeing struggles go on in your safe spaces too can make things so much harder to cope with.

It is okay to feel sad or upset if your safe space doesn't feel the same way it did right now. It doesn't mean it won't feel safe again one day. Life and situations ebb and flow, and circumstances change, as much as we always want good things to stay the same. Good things can come from change too.

Our magnificent and kind friend @xray-vex shared a screenshot on twitter the other day of this tumblr post and I thought it was incredibly appropriate to how a lot of people have been expressing they've been feeling lately.

IF YOU'RE STILL HAVING FUN

are you enjoying scrolling tumblr?
watching youtube? reading that book?
playing that game? drawing that art?
doing that activity? if not,

YOU CAN STOP AND DO SOMETHING ELSE

you don't have to stick to something that you are doing for fun if it isn't fun for you anymore. You can come back! If you've loved it before you are likely to love it again! but you can stop!

Don't get stuck in a loop of doing something that you think should be fun when it isn't! You can put it down for a bit!
Maybe that's the very thing that will make it fun again later!

I know sometimes it feels like you have to respond to that tweet, or get into that discourse, but if you don't have the energy, just remember you don't owe anything to anyone. You are wonderful the way you are, and you deserve to enjoy your space too. If it feels like too much, take a break, watch a new show, read a new book, step away if you need to.

Or if re-watching our pirate show would help-- feel absolutely welcome to do that too. Whatever YOU need for YOU. It will be different for everyone, and there is no shame in wanting to do something different to make you feel better.

There will always be folks here for you if you decide to step away and come back, so don't be afraid to if you need to okay? We love you crew, we care so much about you, and your health. Be well <3
