Hugo, our darling OFMD Hype Man is still at it. Netflix has been asking what you'd like to watch on Netflix in 2025-- What a lovely prompt for the honkening- if you haven't already, feel free to let them know!

My analytical ass brain is already making a mental timeline of all the interesting things that have happened (DJ's posts, his wife's post, etc.)

6:04 PM · Sep 22, 2024 · 3,651 Views

January 1: David posts on IG “got a really good feeling about 2024, guys.”

January 9: DJ announces the show has been canceled by Max.

January 18: DJ posts the very odd “he’s a man” pic of Rhys in Navy uniform on IG (my theory is that this was his way of saying they were going into battle pitching the show).

January 20: DJ posts a selfie on IG of him with the Save OFMD billboard in New York; he tags Netflix, Amazon, and Apple.

March 4: Kristian announces on the live that he’s asked David to be on the live in 2 weeks.

March 5: IATSE starts negotiating for new contracts.

March 7: David posts the show was not picked up by another network.

March 8: David QTs a post and says that the show not getting picked up “has more to do with an industry trying to figure out how to transition to a new era” and that our power as a fandom “is noticed and admired.”

March 18: Kristian announces there will be no WJW (the one DJ was supposed to be on).

March 22: The first time someone noticed that DJ took down the New Year post.

mid-June: I had the theory that if something was going on with the show, DJ might re-post the New Year post so I went to check if it was still gone. It was.

June 25: IATSE reaches a deal for the Basic Agreement.

June 27: IATSE reaches a deal for the Area Standard Agreement.

June 30: Kinga Jenkins posts on IG that David is “working.”

July 5: I noticed that DJ had reposted the New Year post. According to a friend, it wasn’t there that Monday (July 1) when he posted about his new dog.

July 26: DJ qts a post that says Kamala Harris will ensure we get s3, adding “Big if true.” To me, this is the first example of a time when he could have discussed what would happen in s3, but didn’t.

July 29: DJ posts about cats, like A LOT, which he seems to do when in a good mood.

August 2: DJ retweets the “it’s all coming back to me” fanvid.

Aug 5: QTs a post that basically talks about wanting to do the Max logo like the 20th Century Fox logo in Deadpool & Wolverine. David says “let’s see if anyone buys it first.” And is VERY quick with a follow-up post saying “I mean Max not OFMD.” And also says to “maybe wait” to make the sign.

Aug 13: QTs a post that has a theory about S3. Again, I feel like this would have been a good opportunity to discuss what would have happened in s3. He talks about Mary and Evelyn instead.

Aug 30: Retweets a TON of fan tattoos. Posts “we had the #’s btw” but also defends Casey Bloys, the one who said that.

September 16: QTs a post about the Save OFMD billboard in New York and says that he “still gets asked about it a lot.” When someone comments “asked by whom,” he replies “mostly by people who wish audiences would do this for shows on their networks.”

Sep 20: QTs a post about the show Detroiters (a comedy that was canceled after two seasons) getting acquired by Netflix and tags Netflix saying “hmu about another two season comedy that’s available.”

Sept 22: QTs a post that wants “to know how [OFMD] ends” and says “would be an absolute banger.” Again, this would have been a great time to give plot points for s3.

According to the heavy research analysis I just did (using the search feature on Twitter) besides today, DJ has used the unicorn emoji in tweets twice before. Here are those tweets.

I'm not saying it means anything... 🤡

Rosie also put out the call for some help with getting Rhys and Rosie's son, Finn, and his band Great Big Cow some more subscribers to their Youtube channel! The goal was to hit 1,000 subscribers-- and great news, they did it! If you aren't already subscribed, and you're interested, I'm sure they wouldn't mind more! Great Big Cow Band Youtube

Apparently it's been 20 years since the release of Bro'Town! David, Oscar Knightley, and Madeleine Sami voiced characters in the animated series back in 2004!

"A modern day fairytale about five Auckland teenagers growing up in the big bad city, bro'Town chronicles the schoolboy misadventures of Vale, Valea, Sione, Mack and Jeff da Maori in a proudly suburban, non PC satire."

We love his shoutouts to #OFMD and @nathan_foad 🥰

We're also huge fans of Our Flag Means Death and we're sad it came to an end after Season 2. If Wee John Feeney was the star of his own spin-off series, what would you like to see happen next for him?

For the record, we are all sad too. Wee John is an interesting chap, full of contradictions. I would have liked to have seen a little romance for him. I think he's a little lonely out there at sea.

Who is a queer or trans artist/performer/creator that you think is doing really cool work right now? Why are they someone we should all be paying attention to?

I feel like my friend and cast mate, Nathan Foad, is a serious serious comedic talent (and I'd hate for him to hear my compliments haha), and an incredibly talented writer. I can't wait to see his future projects.

Some WB news-- Our friends over at NeverLeftPodcast shared the news! Thanks dears!

Warner Bros. slashed the 'Beetlejuice Beetlejuice' budget by $50 million, fearing it would flop. It made $264 million in two weeks.

Warner Bros. reportedly tried to release "Beetlejuice Beetlejuice" on Max because it was worried it would fail.

== Love Notes ==

Wow Lovelies. What a weekend huh? Y'all have been clowning/honking (however you wanna describe it) for days now and it's so incredibly uplifting to see! It feels like the beginning of the year again, all buzzing with life in the fandom!

I've seen lots of mixed emotions on the subject of renewal today, so tonight I just want to send you a couple reminders.

If you aren't feeling up to Honking for any reason, whether that be that the ups and downs of the cancellation/renewal news, or you've got things going on in your life, or you just don't want to get your hopes up again-- please know, that is OKAY.

If you are honking your head off, tweeting, tumbling, drawing, writing, creating, and putting your whole soul into the clowning after David's tweet on Friday -- That's OKAY too.

If you're passively keeping an eye on things, waiting for news, or focused on other things-- that's also OKAY.

Every single one of us experienced OFMD different from each other. Every single one of us experienced grief from the cancellation differently from one another.

Every single one of us has or has not begun to heal differently.

If someone is having fun honking-- that's great, keeping doing it babes!

If you're feeling like you just can't bear the disappointment again if something goes wrong-- you do what you need to take care of yourself m'dears! Don't push yourself in a way that makes you feel worse.

There's no wrong answer here in how to be involved in what's happening right now. Be kind to one another, and let yourself and others do their thing-- and all is well <3 No matter what happens, we're still here for you crew-- we still care. Don't feel bad for how you are coping and engaging with the fandom right now. Just be yourself.

Goodnight lovelies, I hope the week ahead treats you with kindness and healing.
