Rhys also posted a fun extra video on his paid Substack if you're subscribed and interested in cars!

I've always been into cars.

At school I used to sit in the library at lunch time and read car magazines, getting up to speed with all the latest models and ogling over the classics. Once I got my license to drive, I dove straight into the deep end of sought after machinery, utilizing my hard-earned military money to buy a 1970 MGB GT (British mustard with wire spoke wheels). This would be my first car and the one I drove the length of New Zealand in as after a year I left the Airforce Base for a new home in Burnham Camp in Christchurch. I nearly blew up Taupo on the way as she had a leaking fuel tank and after parking her on a slope, I left to have lunch only to return 30 minutes later to two fire trucks and the street closed off. "What's going on here?" I asked.

Ep 377 Samba Schutte "No Mime Needed To Advance His Chemistry"

Behind The Funny

Samba Schutte is in the Acement this week. A Mauritanian moves to Ethiopia, attends college in Holland where he wins a national comedy competition, moves to LA and gets on a series on HBO MAX, and eventually stars in his own movie. Samba's story is just another boring story of an amazingly talented person. His bad gig story was one we had never heard before.

So the count was put together and the winners were released on the 24th, but since I'm running out of room on the next issue-- it's all going here! The @ofmd-buys-boats raffle is closed and the winners have been announced! First of all-- CONGRATS AND WELL FUCKING DONE EVERYONE! $11,474 sent to charity! And apparently even more! Absolutely amazing job!

== Love Notes ==

Hey lovelies. Coming up soon is the Republic of Pirates coverage! I hope the weekend treated you kindly-- whether you were at the con or not!

I also wanted to send some love and remind you that you really are doing your best.

doesn't mean you don't fit in it, it just means you're making your own section for others like you to fit together.

We can get through just about anything if we support each other. Remember to lean on those closest to you if you need it. You're beautiful and worth it.

I found these love notes from HopeHealingArts that I really loved so I thought I'd share them your way. Please take care of yourselves lovelies, and if you need help, reach out ok? <3
