EXT. THE REVENGE, DECK - DAY

A knife darts in-between the fingers of a flattened hand, seemingly expertly. Cut to The Swede's face, concentrating, as he quickly moves the knife. Frenchie and Wee John Feeney observe.

Roach
I call this game "stabby hands."

He winces several times. Finally, he lifts his hand. It's bloody and cut up.

Roach (CONT'D)
I'm pretty bad at it.

Jim lies in a hammock with a hat over his face. Lucius sneaks past, eyes glued to Jim. He heads downstairs into the GALLEY.

INT. GALLEY OF THE REVENGE - MOMENTS LATER

Lucius comes to Jim's door. It's locked. He produces a specially BENT FORK and PICKS the lock.

INT. JIM'S CABIN - MOMENTS LATER

"Roach" (ep. 102) #5

"Queer stories deserve more than a rushed conclusion; they deserve a full series run."

Netflix's treatment of #Heartstopper is the latest in a "long-standing industry trend of treating queer series as 'niche' content."

Sound familiar? #OFMD

Read more: www.cbr.com/heartstopper...

Ultimately, true representation in media needs proper investment. Studios and streamers, especially in today's landscape, expect instant success for queer series and are less likely to allow slow growth as they do with more mainstream stories. For them, investing in a final movie is more often than not a much cheaper route as it eliminates long-term actor contracts, condenses production schedules, and is much easier to market.

There's also the unfortunate side to the industry where some companies will greenlight queer content to simply ensure they meet inclusion quotas, but rarely sustain these shows long enough to allow stronger audience investment. We live in a world over-saturated with content and studios and streamers need to understand that overnight hits are rarities these days. They need to stop seeing LGBTQ+ stories as special projects and the pattern of early support to early cancelation needs to stop.

This decades-long trend sends a message to those watching, which ultimately states that while LGBTQ+ stories are good, they're not important enough to finish properly. It reinforces that queer stories, complexities, and happy endings are too niche for mainstream TV — and that needs to change. Heartstopper's upcoming movie finale continues this pattern. While it is ultimately a cause for celebration, as Netflix puts it, it's also a quiet reminder that queer stories deserve more than a rushed conclusion; they deserve a full series run.

Our Flag Means Death

ZINE WEEK

Make a zine and print yourself
a collection of everyone else's!

May 25-31

A promotional graphic for Zine Week. It features a background of various zine covers and icons. The text "Our Flag Means Death" is at the top, followed by "ZINE WEEK" in large letters. Below that is the text "Make a zine and print yourself a collection of everyone else's!". At the bottom, it says "May 25-31". The background includes icons like a heart, an eggplant, a book, and a sign.
